Little Prize Essay Winner To Take Trip to Jamestown With Money That She Won

Systematic Study by Which Victor Prepared Her Article.

Washington will enjoy the sights of the Jamestown Exposition just because she toric place that she was able to write n essay on the Jamestown settlemen offered by the society of the Colonial Dames of Washington. She is Miss Claribda Elizabeth Nichols, a pupil in eighth grade of the Buchanan School, E street, between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets southeast, as an-

Miss Nichols declares that no one will ver make her believe that the num ber thirteen is unlucky. She says it is the luckiest number of all, and that as long as she lives she will place her faith in thirteen. All of this is because the number has played an important part in her affairs of late and every-thing has turned out so heautifully. This charming little girl is thirteen years old, the Jamestown settlement, about which she wrote and received the prize was made May 13, and it was also on May 13 that she learned that her essay had won over all those which had been submitted by pupils of the eighth grade. Studies Systematically.

pupils that a prize was within their she would try for it, and she went about told the children that a member town settlement in her history classes, procured everything she could that told anything of the event and went to the Public Library and studied all the pictures about it. She noticed everything about these paintings, the quaint dress of the Englishmen, the little details that told much of that historic time and then went home and did a lot of thinking. She would not solicit assistance from anybody and, in fact, determined to write the whole thing without anybody's help. She worked over it and became so interested in the real story of the first English settlement that instead of finding the composition a task, she found it a great pleasure. She wrote sixteen pages of manuscript telling each of the details in a comprehensive way, used her best English, and arranged the story so that its style was easy and graceful. When she had written have easy in a way that satisfied her, she turned it in to her teacher. That was the last she heard of it for some days. It was the duty of the teacher to select from all the essays the one which seemed to her the most meritorious.

One day the supervising principal of

ELLA NELSON A HEROINE, JUST LIKE OTHER GIRLS CARRYING THE U.S. MAIL

Since the publication several weeks | Bolton, rural carrier, of Mobile, who,

Since the publication several weeks ago of statements showing the remark-able services of Miss Ella Nelson, a rural carrier in one of the New England States, who worked her way through a blizzard which kept the entire community indoors, Assistant Postmaster General DeGraw has been the recipient of numerous letters, newspaper clipplings, and photographs from places which claim distinction in the possession of rural carriers of the fair sex.

Indiana has two candidates for honors in this respect, and they are sisters—Mises Nelle and Effie Stevens. It is said to them that they permit no sort of weather conditions to interfere with their delivery of the mail. On one occasion when the roads were in such condition as to be impassable to vehicles of any kind, the two sisters shouldered the mail bags, one of which contained 200 copies of a country paper, and traveled the entire route of twenty-five miles on foot, walking from 7 a. m. 10 8 p. m. in order to cover the route.

Another incident of bravery to which the attention of the Postoffice Department was called is that of Miss Ella
